Description :

Prsentation de l'diteurThe saga continues in this installment of the best selling series, The Marechal Chronicles: VOLUME IV, THE CHASEMelisse and the Marechal de Barristide have survived a demonic battle only to find themselves at odds with one another.A noble yet lonely man, the Marechal would have her stay at his side while he searches for the evil behind hideous murders throughout the realm. Yet Melisse believes her destiny lies over the mountains, far from her past.However that same past finds its way back to her and Melisse learns of another murder at House Perene. Only she is too late as she discovers that the blood running in Helene Perene's veins is no more noble than her own.Meanwhile, Silas has learned to play the game of intrigue and deception at the Estril court while he remains captive and consort to a High General's wife. Jealousy threatens his very existence but nothing will stop him as he strives for his own freedom. Behind them all lies the broken tower of the Alchemist. It is a curse to anyone who falls under its shadow. In bitter chagrin, Melisse discovers she is no exception as she makes the attempt to unravel its terrifying mysteries. This is Volume Four in a multi-part series and begins just after the events recounted in The Marechal Chronicles: Volumes I, II and III. It is strongly recommended that one read the prior installments before Volume Four.

Biographie de l'auteur I live in a land where giants have walked. Here, water springs cold and sweet from rocks cloven by legends in their passing. Stone edifices mark the countryside, risen hundreds of years ago. Devils stalk the foothills and comely maids with webbed feet lie in wait along rough mountain passages. France is my home and imbues all that I write ... come with me, for a short while, and we shall venture among the dark, twisting paths together.
